

SABRE-TOOTHED TIGER

🦴 It wasn't actually a tiger Even though people call it a "Sabre-Toothed Tiger," it wasn't a tiger at all. It was its own kind of big cat.

😸 It had giant banana-sized teeth Its famous fangs could grow longer than a crayon. They were perfect for taking down big prey.

🏋️ It was super strong Smilodon had a short, powerful body — more like a furry wrestler than a speedy runner.

❄️ It lived with mammoths and giant sloths These cats roamed North and South America during the Ice Age, sharing the world with many other giant animals.

SHORT-FACED BEAR

🐻 It was one of the biggest bears ever Standing on its back legs, it could reach as tall as a two-story house.

🏃 It had super long legs Its legs were so long that scientists think it could run faster than most other bears.

🍽️ It was a powerful Ice Age hunter It lived at the same time as mammoths and giant sloths, and it probably scared almost every animal around.

🌎 It lived all over North America From Alaska to Mexico, this giant bear roamed huge open spaces during the Ice Age.
