San Bernardino National Forest 🌲🐻

San Bernardino National Forest is a huge mountain playground in Southern California, filled with tall trees, cool animals, and tons of outdoor adventures. These facts keep things simple and fun for kids!

1. It's really, really big

- The forest covers over 823,000 acres, which is like a giant nature park stretching across mountains and valleys.

2. It was created more than 100 years ago

- San Bernardino National Forest became an official national forest in 1907, making it one of California's oldest protected wild places.

3. It has four different mountain ranges

- Kids can explore parts of the San Gabriel, San Bernardino, San Jacinto, and Santa Rosa Mountains—all inside the same forest!

4. You can play in snow and desert in the same day

- The forest has everything from warm, sunny desert trails to snowy mountain peaks, so adventures can look totally different depending on where you go.

5. Lots of animals live here

- The forest is home to deer, black bears, bobcats, hawks, and many other creatures that kids might spot while hiking or camping.
